Bundy makes an 'eleventh-hour' confession

Limits to killing 8 in Utah

BYU Staff Writer

Curtis was 14 years old when he disappeared from a youth conference at BYU.

Lake County Sheriff's officials said Bundy killed her.

What prosecutors call "an eleventh-hour bid to stay alive," told Salt Lake County Sheriff's Investigator Dennis Couch that said Curtis and seven other females in Utah, two more than previously believed.

Curtis, a Bountiful girl, vanished from a BYU-sponsored youth conference on Jan. 7, 1975.

He left a banquet at 7 p.m. to go to a room at Helaman Halls, according to Bill Richards, BYU Public Relations Director. "Somewhere before that there, she disappeared without a trace," Richards said.

For a year and a half of intensive investigation, "there were no results" ever from the hundreds of leads Richards said.

I interviewed over 100 people, checked hundreds of leads. Every lead we tried ended in a dead end," said University Police Sgt. Dan Dan who investigated the disappearance.

Congress reviews closure proposal

Editor's Note: The following is the first in a three-part series on Fort Douglas, one of 138 U.S. military bases Congress might close.

Lake City — Congress has until the middle of this month to pass or reject a proposal made last month by the Commission on Base Realignment and Closure to close military installations across the country and reduce the size of one of them being Fort Douglas.

The Commission, appointed by former Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci to circumvent 1975 legislation that made base closure more difficult, listed Fort Douglas as one base which has outlived its function.

The base is positioned in the center of the University of Utah campus which severely restricts its operational flexibility," the Commission report said.

A 120-year-old base lies crouched in the southeast corner of Salt Lake City, bordered on one side by a residential park and on the other side by a golf course.

Activities currently assigned to Fort Douglas supervise regional Reserve-Component functions including reserves in seven western states, supervise the payroll in the West and support area recruiting.

The Commission, which reviewed 4,200 military proposals, recommended that the Reserve Component facilities be segregated and retained within the Fort. The other functions will be relocated to Fort Carson, Colo.

Both University Police and Salt Lake City detectives asked Couch to talk to Bundy about Curtis' disappearance.

Clark said there had been speculation that Bundy was involved, but the link hadn't been established by those who previously talked with the killer.

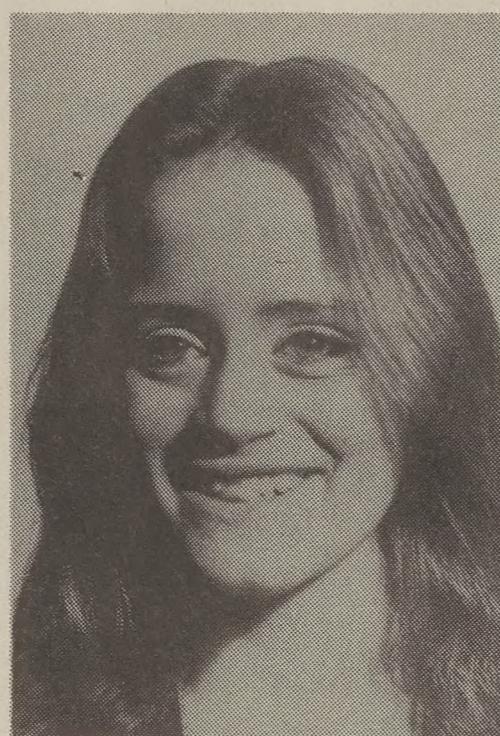

Couch spent 90 minutes Sunday night interviewing Bundy in the Florida State Prison, according to Utah County Sheriff Dave Bateman.

Bateman said Monday that no specific information concerning Curtis has been passed to him yet.

The Salt Lake County Sheriff's office said that information from the Bundy interviews will not be released until there has been a thorough review of the tapes and information is passed on to the victims' family members. The Associated Press reported that Bundy also drew some crude maps that could help locate the bodies of the missing Utahns.

The other Utah case newly linked to Bundy is that of 17-year-old Laura Anna Aime, of Salem, who vanished Oct. 31, 1974. Hikers found her body three weeks later in American Fork Canyon.

Bundy is suspected in the deaths of two other Utahns found dead in 1975 and three others whose bodies were feels great remorse for what he's done."

STARKE, Fla. — The highest courts of the state and the nation refused Monday night to block this morning's execution of Ted Bundy, who during the last three days confessed to 20 murders in Western states.

The 42-year-old law school dropout was described as subdued and emotional as he met with psychiatrist Dorothy Lewis, apparently as part of his lawyers' preparations for a possible last-minute argument that Bundy was mentally incompetent to be executed.

Gov. Martinez told reporters in Tallahassee that three psychiatrists were standing by to examine Bundy if necessary and certify his mental competency.

After confessing during the weekend to two Colorado murders, Bundy talked with Colorado investigators again Monday, but disclosed no information about three unsolved slayings in the state, officials said.

Bundy also met with James Dobson, host of a California Christian radio show, during the afternoon. In a one-hour interview, Dobson said that Bundy tearfully expressed "great remorse" but wanted to stress that he believes hard-core pornography "was the fuel for his fantasies," which spurred him into violent crimes.

Dobson, a psychologist whose show "Focus on the Family" is heard daily on about 1,300 radio stations, said Bundy admitted he was a murderer and said society had a right to protect itself from people "with his weakness." Dobson said Bundy now is "thankful that . . . again he is in touch with his feelings and his guilt and he

U.S. Supreme Court justices voted 5-4 to reject an emergency request aimed at keeping Bundy alive until a formal appeal could be filed with the nation's highest court. The justices had four times previously rejected formal appeals from Bundy.

Bundy's lawyers argued that jurors in the Leach case were misled about the importance of their role in determining whether Bundy would receive the death penalty or life in prison for his crime. The Florida Supreme Court turned down an appeal saying the jury instructions were wrong.

After confessing during the weekend to two Colorado murders, Bundy talked with Colorado investigators again Monday, but disclosed no information about three unsolved slayings in the state, officials said.

Th U.S. Supreme Court also rejected a request to delay the execution until the high court could hear an appeal claiming that Bundy's death sentence was tainted because his lawyers were not shown all the information considered in the sentencing.

The state Supreme Court on Monday night denied his request for a stay and denied related requests for stays so that higher courts could review it, said Supreme Court deputy clerk Tanya Carroll.

"We gave him nothing," she said.

This is the fourth time an execution has been set for Bundy. But this weekend he began confessing to a string of murders. He has been linked to as many as 36 killings and disappearances of young women in Washington, Colorado, Utah and other Western states.

Colorado Attorney General Duane Woodard accused him of stringing along investigators to avoid or delay execution. Martinez said the execution would go forward whether or not Bundy has time to tell all he knows about killings and locations of bodies.

Salt Lake County Sheriff's Detective Dennis Couch said Sunday that Bundy mentioned his involvement in up to eight Utah killings, two more than authorities suspected. Earlier Sunday, Bundy confessed to two murders in Idaho, where officials had never linked him to any killings.

Bundy also provided investigators Friday and Saturday with details of eight Washington killings and two in Colorado for which he has long been suspected, authorities said.

2nd Soviet earthquake in 2 months kills an estimated 1,000 in Tadzhikistan

Associated Press

MOSCOW — A predawn earthquake in Soviet Central Asia unleashed a 50-foot-high wall of dirt and mud that buried one mountain village and swept through at least two others Monday, killing up to 1,000 people as they slept, officials said.

The devastating earthquake in the republic of Tadzhikistan was the second to strike the Soviet Union in two months.

"Almost everybody died," Zainiddin Nasreddinov, editor-in-chief of Tadzhikistan's official news agency, said by telephone after visiting the wrecked farming settlement of Sharora. He estimated the number of dead there alone at 600.

Sharora "had more than 150 peasant households before that tragic moment," the Soviet news agency Tass reported. "Now most of it is razed to the ground by the ruthless force of the natural calamity."

Tass said that in the disaster zone 1,800 miles southeast of Moscow the number of dead was estimated at 1,000, but cautioned that was a preliminary figure. "Rescue work is being continued and distant mountain villages have not been checked yet," Tass said. Damaged roads were hampering those efforts.

The quake struck the southwestern part of Tadzhikistan, a Soviet republic of more than 4.8 million people which borders Afghanistan and China.

The 40-second tremor, at 5:02 a.m. (4:02 p.m. MST Sunday) was centered about 20 to 30 miles southwest of Dushanbe, Tadzhikistan's capital, a city of more than 460,000 people in the fertile Gissar district, a center of grape-growing and livestock-raising, Tass said.

An official at Dushanbe's seismic center said the quake was strong enough to knock things off shelves in tall apartment buildings in the city, but that it caused no known damage or injuries there. He declined to give his name.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Reston, Va., estimated the quake at 5.4 on the Richter scale, which measures ground motion as recorded on a seismograph. The Dec. 7 earthquake in northwestern Armenia, 1,300 miles west of Dushanbe, registered a 6.9 on the Richter scale and killed 25,000 people.

The earthquake unloosed a wall of mud at least five miles wide that buried the village of Okuli-Bolo and much of Sharora, said Erkin Kasmov, an official of Tadzhikistan's Foreign Ministry.

Most of the victims were asleep, Maj. Alexander Loparev, duty officer at Tadzhikistan's Interior Ministry headquarters in Dushanbe said. Residents of another village, Okuli-Poyen, apparently roused in time, fled in panic before the mudslide, which traveled 1.25 to 1.5 miles, could reach their homes, Kasmov said from Dushanbe.

Abortion issue sparks demonstrations

By HISAYOSHI IWAMITSU
and Associated Press

The U.S. Supreme Court's decision to reconsider a 1973 case that constitutionalized the right to an abortion sparked anti-abortion demonstrations Saturday in Salt Lake City and Monday in the nation's capital.

President Bush on Monday called abortion "our American tragedy" as nearly 70,000 protesters marked the anniversary of the Supreme Court's landmark decision legalizing abortion. The march organizer said the new administration should "provide actions to carry out their words."

BYU Law School Professor Lynn D. Wardle said the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision should be reconsidered by the Supreme Court.

"I think that the (1973) decision was a poor decision. The court did not analyze problems very clearly," and the decision, which allowed abortion on demand through the first 20 weeks of pregnancy — the time of fetal viability — was "absolute and arbitrary," Wardle said.

The U.S. Justice Department asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review the Missouri case called Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, and the court agreed Jan. 9 to hear an appeal seeking reversal of the 1973 decision.

Wardle said the Roe vs. Wade case has proved to be a very unworkable decision; the lower courts have had trouble applying abortion cases well. Consequently, when an abortion case comes, the lower courts just "throw up their hands and strike it down" whatever the allegation is, he said.

Wardle said there have been more than 20 Supreme Court decisions since Roe v. Wade. "If we count the court of appeals' decisions and the federal district court of appeals' decisions, they are probably 400 since 1973," he said.

Wardle said he does not think that the U.S. Supreme Court will reverse the Missouri case. "The court might let the state legislatures have a little more room to regulate abortion than we have set it in the past."

If the U.S. Supreme Court allows the states to determine their own policies on abortion, there is a good chance that the Utah Legislature will pass a bill banning on-demand termination of pregnancy. U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh said he expects the Supreme Court justices to give regulation of abortion back to the states, overturning their 1973 ruling that permitted abortion within the first two trimesters of pregnancy.

President of Right to Life of Utah Dee Nielson said, "The 1973 decision was a seven to two decision," and every abortion case which has been heard since then has leaned against the 1973 decision in the Supreme Court. She said she feels that the number is coming to be almost even.

Nielson said she protests legalized abortion because of the number of physical risks associated with abortion. But the Supreme Court ruled that "we are not allowed to require giving that knowledge to the women," she said. She also said abortion can bring on a serious mental condition, which the psychiatric community labels as P.A.S. (Post Abortion Syndrome). She compared the syndrome to the trauma that some war veterans face after they return from battle. Women may suppress feelings about the problem for years, but things such as the birth of a new child can bring it "to the front of their mind" and "they'll be emotionally devastated," Nielson said.

Bush sets a brisk pace for his presidency Lights burn brightly well after dark in this place, he says

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — George Bush set a brisk pace for his new presidency as he rose before dawn Monday. White House officials said ethical lapses and told anti-abortion activists that the Supreme Court's ruling legalizing abortion "was not and should be overturned."

Following a practice adopted by Reagan, Bush spoke by telephone to world leaders to thank them for sending messages of congratulations and expressing an interest in cooperating for world peace, Fitzwater said.

Bush said he wanted "to restate my firm support of our cause and to share with you my deep personal concern about our American tragedy of abortion on demand." He said the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion "was wrong and should be overruled."

Bush, who saw the Reagan administration's reputation tarnished by questions of ethical lapses, told his staff he wanted them to set a high standard of conduct.

Bush said the guidelines should be "pride, honesty, spirit of idealism when it comes to public service, knowing that our actions must always be of the highest integrity."

Fitzwater said Bush was not trying to draw a contrast with the Reagan administration on ethics. "He simply

Cross fire takes lives at Argentine base

Buenos Aires, Argentina — Armed civilians seized a small military base near the capital on Monday, killing or wounding 24 people. Soldiers firing tank shells, mortars and machine guns retook most of the base, news reports and officials said.

The civilian attackers who stormed the base, carried pamphlets supporting officers who have led three previous uprisings, the private news agency Diario y Noticias said.

"Military, the situation at the 3rd infantry regiment at La Tablada is dominated," said Facundo Suarez, state intelligence secretary. Some civilian attackers remained inside, and gunfire could be heard from the base as he spoke on the radio, said Suarez.

Hospital officials said at least four soldiers were killed and 12 wounded in the fighting, along with one reporter.

Two small tanks opened the noon counterattack, firing on the officers' club in which the civilians were thought to be isolated, Telam said. Following an insurrection 21 months ago, civilians attacked the Government House, the official residence of President Raul Alfonsin, said Telam, the government's news agency.

The civilian president spoke by telephone with Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena and Army Chief Gen. Francisco Gassino, telling them to retake the base, presidential press secretary Jose Ignacio Lopez told reporters.

Increased tax evasion affects Utahns

SALT LAKE CITY — Tax evasion may be costing Utah $100 million a year if national figures hold true for the Beehive State, costing the average person who pays an honest tax about $642 per year, said the Utah Foundation.

The non-profit research organization said its recent report shows that nationally, 17 percent of the taxes owed on legal income go unpaid, translating into an $84.9 billion loss for the 1987 tax year.

Under-reported income by individual filers accounts for the largest proportion, accounting for $48.3 billion, or 57 percent of the 1987 tax gap, the foundation said.

Tax evasion has been increasing at an annual rate of about 4.1 percent, after an adjustment for inflation, according to a 1987 study by the American Bar Association's Commission on Tax Compliance.

Tax evasion aggravates the federal deficit problem. The tax gap of $85 billion for the 1987 tax year was equal to about 55 percent of the federal deficit for that year, the study showed.

Use of public work contracts defined

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in what three justices called "a giant step backward" for racial equality, drastically limited Monday the power of states and cities to earmark public works contracts for minority-owned businesses.

Voting 6-3, the court said the Richmond, Va., City Council unconstitutional discrimination against whites in awarding a contractor on any city building contract must give at least 30 percent of the value of the project to firms at least one-half minority owned.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, writing for the court, said the city that was once the seat of the old Confederacy and now has a majority of blacks on its governing body relied on "past societal discrimination" to justify the quota.

"None of the evidence presented by the city points to any identified discrimination in the Richmond construction industry," she said.

"The dream of a nation of equal citizens in a society where race is irrelevant to personal opportunity and achievement would be lost in a mosaic of shifting preferences based on unmeasurable claims of past wrongs," O'Connor said.

Timpanogos' ex-directors waive exams

OREM — Three former Timpanogos Community Mental Health Center directors waived their rights to a preliminary hearing examination Monday in the 8th Circuit Court in Orem.

The defendants were bound over for arraignment scheduled Feb. 10 in 4th District Court. A trial date will be set if not guilty pleas are entered.

The three men who held top level management positions were charged with the felonies in October 1987 and resigned in April 1988.

Glen R. Brown, 63, former executive director, is charged with nine counts of theft and eight counts of misusing public funds.

Carl V. Smith, 41, former director of specialty programs, faces 25 charges, each of theft and misusing public money, and one charge of tax evasion.

Craig W. Stephens, 34, former director of administrative services, is charged with 24 counts of theft and 24 counts of misusing public funds. He also faces one charge of income tax evasion.

Plan for Utah casinos may be reviewed

SALT LAKE CITY — Two senators want a proposal which allows gambling in Wendover, Utah, to be placed on the legislature's interim study schedule.

The resolution, sponsored by Sen. Bill Barton, R-West Valley City, seeks to allow spot-zoning to permit casinos to operate in Wendover.

Although the Senate committee unanimously tabled the measure in a hearing last week, Sen. Karl Swan, D-Tooele, told the Senate on Monday that putting the gambling proposal on the schedule shows the legislature's concern for the problems of Wendover residents.

Businesses in Wendover, Utah, are failing, yet businesses across the road in Wendover, Nev., are booming as a result of its five casinos.

However, approval of gambling conflicts with Utah's traditional moral values. "They have to understand they are proposing a solution that is very difficult for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and many others in the state to accept," said Swan, a member of the Church.

Deer attracted to city life upset yards and citizens

By JIM RAYBURN

Universe Staff Writer

While many people think deer are invading their territory, a local game manager said it may be the opposite.

"It seems like the deer are coming lower, but maybe the deer have not moved into towns any more than the towns have moved to the deer," said Paul Tervort, regional game manager at the central region offices of the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources in Springville.

Tervort said the deer are coming lower because when a doe takes her fawns into an area, the fawns will return to the same area the following year.

The harsh winter of 1983 brought many deer out of the mountains, and therefore those deer and their offspring may have become accustomed to returning to the cities each winter, he said.

According to Tervort, many people believe the deer come into the valleys because it is warmer or because there is more food available.

Tervort said studies show the opposite is the case. He said a temperature inversion occurs for a good portion of the winter, and it is actually warmer in the mountains.

Studies show that deer remaining in the mountains through winter are healthier than those that come into the valleys.

Tervort said his office receives numerous calls from citizens about the deer. They get complaints about deer destroying property, eating shrubs or standing around.

"One guy will call and complain about the deer, and the person next door thinks it's perfectly fine and wants to know how he can make it better for them," said Tervort.

Carol Huff, head dispatcher for the Springville City Police Department, said they receive calls everyday from citizens complaining about the deer. She said that about three deer per week are hit by motorists during the winter.

According to Huff, citizens expect the police to shoot wounded deer, which is against department policy. Huff said other than accident reports, all complaints are referred to the Department of Wildlife Resources.

Tervort said his office lacks manpower and the necessary finances to handle most complaints. The DWR usually recommends ways the citizens can keep the deer off their property, such as wrapping shrubs in burlap.

He said the only deer and elk problems his office is obligated to respond to are those involving agricultural or commercial orchard damage.

Tervort said the biggest problem he sees with the deer is the change in people's attitudes. "Fifteen years ago people would accept the deer... Now they are perceived as a problem," said Tervort.

LDS graphics program

Inventors donate to missions

JOELLE M. ROBINSON
Universe Staff Writer

Two BYU business students have invented a computer software program called Mormon Clip Art and are donating a portion of the proceeds to the missionary fund of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Mormon Clip Art is a package of 75 high resolution graphics designed specifically for ward newsletters and other related church documents. It is designed and created by Lee Nuttall, a senior from St. George majoring in marketing and Todd Brooks, a senior from Idaho Falls majoring in finance.

Nuttall said Mormon Clip Art is designed for use in 5.0 Wordperfect and Macintosh computers. The product's function is to incorporate graphics with text.

"The computer has images stored in it and the computer wraps around the image," Nuttall said.

This means the computer prints the document and inserts graphics into it wherever they are desired, he said.

Brooks said the graphics include pictures of temples, prophets, missionaries and other church-related symbols. The graphics were created by Daily Universe artist Dan Ben-shoff.

Nuttall and Brooks have decided to donate a portion of their proceeds to the Church's missionary fund.

"We just feel like we should give something back to the Church," Brooks said.

Brooks said the idea for the product's invention was Nuttall's. Once Nuttall thought of the concept it just took putting together, he said.

Brooks said they had to arrange for an artist to put the product together on a computer and find the revenue to get started. Then they began to market it.

The product's first release sold out pretty quickly, Brooks said.

"Our national inventory was 100 and we sold all of those in a two week period," Nuttall said. "It is a quality product offered at a cheap price and is very applicable to the LDS market," Brooks said.

Mormon Clip Art is available in the BYU Bookstore, Deseret Bookstore, Provo Mission Bookstore and most computer outlets in Provo and Salt Lake City.

A temple edition of Mormon Clip Art is due to be released Friday and plans are being made for special occasion and missionary editions.

BYU asks club president to resign

BRADY BINGHAM
NICOLE WOOD
Universe Staff Writers

the BYU Black Student Association president has resigned following a request by Rush Sumpter, director of student leadership development.

Sumpter asked for the resignation of Gary T. Thompson, citing a violation of trust.

Thompson failed to meet the 12 credit hour (per semester) requirement for work-study students, and "it is clear that Gary solicited contracts in the name of the university without authorization," said Sumpter.

Only purchasing agents are authorized to deal with the amounts of university money — anything over $10,000," Sumpter said.

The university wants contracts to go the purchasing office, where a expert and legal purchasing agent will handle the negotiations, Sumpter said.

According to Sumpter, Thompson made negotiations with Rev. Arthur Langford Jr., the Harlem Renaissance, Comedy Shoppe and Patricia Russell McCleod to kit during BYU "Black Awareness Week." The four contracts totaled over $11,000, said Sumpter.

Thompson cited personal reasons for not completing his required semester hours.

In a letter to Sumpter regarding the contract agreement, Thompson said, "Never did I pass myself off as an official representative of BYU. On the contract next to my name is the word 'correspondent.'"

Thompson continued, "American Program Bureau (a speaking engagement agency) sent the contracts to me as a means to pressure me into getting these speakers approved as quick as possible. This is a well-known and obvious salesman pressure tactic."

Joelle Aull, former president of BSA and current BYU vice president for "Black Awareness Week," was in charge of instructing Thompson of the contract procedures, according to Sumpter.

Aull said, "I told Gary several times about contracts and the procedure."

Aull, Sumpter and Alf Pratte, faculty adviser for BSA, said they had no knowledge until December of the contracts Thompson received. Thompson allegedly received the contacts in September, said Sumpter.

Thompson was being paid for his duties as BSA president through the work-study program. "Gary is the only one I've ever known to be paid in a club president position," said Sumpter. "We agreed to pay him for that job. This is just a specific situation that fit Gary well."

Thompson said, "I really wanted to keep this in the student life family, but — forget it."

In his letter to Sumpter, Thompson requested a club meeting with Pratte and all BSA members to decide whether he (as president) has let them down.

"If they voted him to stay, I wouldn't have a problem. I just wouldn't pay him," said Sumpter. "He doesn't automatically get work-study money, it's because there is a financial need."

Sumpter said he wishes Thompson had come to speak to him sooner.

"I don't trust Gary right now. He needs to restore that trust," Sumpter said.

BYU chemistry professor to chair chemical society

SCOTT H. WAITE

BYU associate professor of chemistry was recently voted chairman-elect of the local Central Utah section of the American Chemical Society.

John D. Lamb, who is also BYU director of research administration, will serve as chairman-elect for the year 1989, and will assume the responsibilities of chairman during 1990, said Richard T. Hawkins, a BYU professor of chemistry.

Steven A. Fleming, chairman of the local unit and a BYU chemistry professor, said the unit includes all of the counties south of Point of the Mountain. It has a current enrollment of more than 100 members.

According to Hawkins, the American Chemical Society is a national organization with more than 100,000 members.

Lamb has been associated with BYU for many years. He received his bachelor's degree in 1971 and his doctorate degree in 1978, both from BYU. For several years he directed the "Macrocyclic" research program in the BYU Thermonuclear Institute.

From 1982 to 1984 Lamb was a program manager in the Office of Basic Energy Sciences in Washington, D.C. In 1984 he returned to BYU and assumed his current positions. He is also co-author of more than 70 publications.

Other BYU chemistry professors are serving in the local unit in 1989. They are: Byron J. Wilson, past-chairman; S. Scott Zimmerman, counselor; Nolan F. Mangelson, alternate counselor; and James L. Bills, secretary-treasurer.

2 dates, 2 topics set for SAC Yak

General Meeting — Student Advisory Council general meetings will be held Thursdays at 5 p.m. in 376 ELWC.

All meetings are open to the public. Students who would like to address the council on a particular issue, contact John Nemelka at 378-7987 before Jan. 25 to be placed on the agenda.

Announcements — To contact your stake or college representative, call 378-7987 or 387-6376 and ask for his or her number.

SAC Yaks — Jan. 26 topic is Academic Recognition. Feb. 2 topic is Miss BYU.

If You Want to Get Involved — Applications for next year's Student Advisory Council are available at the receptionist's desk on the fourth floor of ELWC. They are due Jan. 25.

SAC needs volunteers to help with committees, research and surveys. If you are interested contact John Nemelka at 378-7987.

SAC Yak — SAC Yak will be featuring the committee for Academic Recognition and Scholarship Publication, Jan. 25, in the Cougar Eats at noon. The committee for Academic Recognition and Scholarship Publication is designed to help students in two areas. First, this committee is working on obtaining the information and qualifications for all scholarships available on campus. This includes university, college and departmental scholarships. This information would then be compiled into pamphlets which would be easily accessible to interested students. The second thrust of this committee is to find a way to acknowledge academic excellence to a greater number of students. The questions to be discussed at this week's SAC Yak are:

• Are you aware of all the scholarships that you can apply for?

• Would you like easier access to scholarship information?

• Do you feel that your academic efforts go unnoticed?

Bellini: A hard road to the top

By NICOLE WILLARDSON
University Staff Writer

When Matt Bellini really likes something, it's simply "very cool." It's in his words, frequently punctuated with the word "cool," that Bellini's age and innocence surface. Otherwise, he appears a man far beyond his years.

No one really knows what to expect from this 20-year-old, who rocketed to stardom as BYU's leading running back. Bellini exhibits the grace and assurance of a seasoned pro.

Although things are going well for Bellini now, his climb to the top hasn't always been a smooth one. He was in a car accident five years ago that tore the entire top of his left hand off, down to the bone. It required major surgery, leaving him hospitalized for weeks.

Doctors told him he wouldn't be able to catch the ball, which meant he wouldn't play his senior year in high school. During therapy he went through excruciating pain. But Bellini's determination proved them wrong.

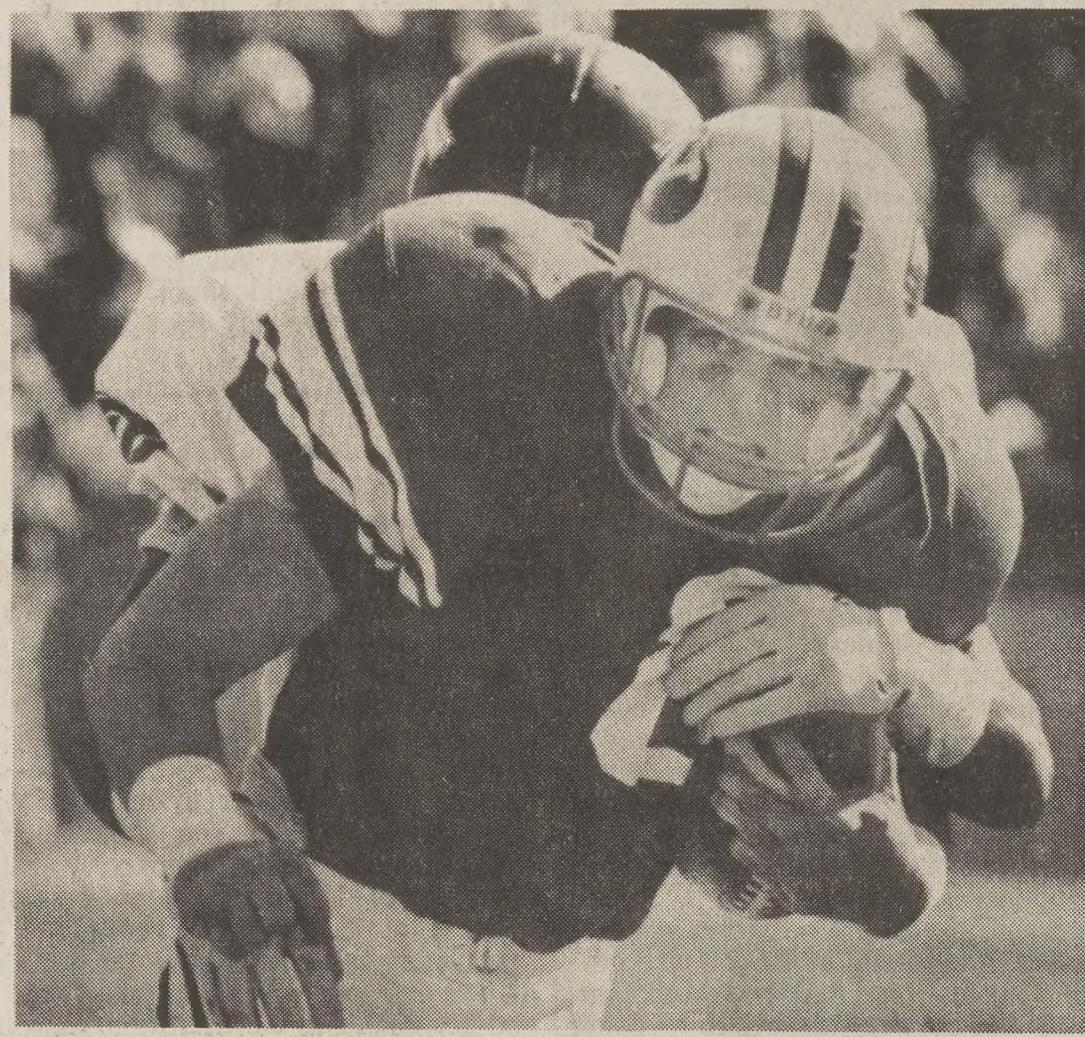

Joy Bellini, Matt's mom, said, "Matthew and I became especially close after he got out of the hospital because we literally had to spend all day every day for four weeks together, with Matt propped up in the living room watching television."

She said Matt was determined to play ball. He did play that season, and has been playing ever since.

His closest friends say the first thing that comes to mind about Bellini is that he has a tremendous desire to do the very best he can with whatever he tries.

Mike O'Brien a 22-year-old senior from Illinois, and one of Bellini's best friends, said, "The one thing that really sticks out in my mind is that Matt knows when to separate work from pleasure. He's very mature for his age, but not to the extent of taking himself too seriously. He's a fun-loving, personable guy."

Bellini was recruited by such schools as Washington State, Cal-

BYU running back Matt Bellini, shown here in action earlier this season, has overcome difficult physical barriers in his climb to become the team's leading multi-purpose player.

Berkeley and Utah State, but decided to come to BYU because of the success of his brother Mark. Bellini said BYU seemed to offer a lot he was interested in, without any tricky policies.

The Bellini's are a very close-knit family — father Michael, mother Joy, brother Mark, sister Lynn and Matt. Joy and Michael support their kids in anything they do.

Joy Bellini said, "We feel so fortunate that he's had the opportunity to attend BYU; it's changed his life in so many ways."

One change is that Matt will soon be a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Bellini's said they feel very happy about his decision.

One of Bellini's biggest heroes is his brother Mark, who now plays for the Indianapolis Colts. Matt said, "I have a great deal of respect for him. He's done a lot of things with himself. It's amazing he came to school here without a scholarship, not knowing anybody."

"We never really even heard of BYU. Just taking the chance to come up here and be as successful as he was is really amazing. Seeing him play in the NFL and seeing everything pay off for him, I'm just really happy for him."

Bellini said his plans for the future include owning his own business. He

BYU grad to lecture

By MOLLY R. LARSON
University Staff Writer

A BYU graduate will address music composition majors and the public today at 11 a.m. The free lecture will be in the Madsen Recital Hall in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Joseph Downing, chairman of the theory and composition at Syracuse University, is speaking as part of the Barlow Lecture series.

Composers from the United States and abroad are brought in to lecture on their music, said Merrill Bradshaw, a BYU music professor.

"It gives the students a chance to get to know the composers, and the composers a chance to get to know the students here at BYU," Bradshaw said.

The lectures help the students understand what to expect in the music world and what will be required of them after graduation, he said.

Downing's academic specializations include analysis, aural skills, composition, counterpoint, orchestration and rudiments in music theory, organ performance and instrumental conducting. He won the Outstanding Creative Musician Award at BYU in 1979.

Although few critics faulted Dali's technical virtuosity, they did not hold his work in the highest esteem. Most felt his was a flawed talent, sometimes managing to balance realistic technique and irrational content but too often caught up in his own role as a poseur-painter.

Most of Dali's critically successful works were completed before he was 35.

Painter Salvador Dali dies at 84

Associated Press

FIGUERAS, Spain — Surrealist master Salvador Dali, who was among this century's most important painters and who created a public image to match his art, died Monday in the town where he was born 84 years ago.

The melting clocks and barren landscape of his "Persistence of Memory" made an indelible impression on contemporary culture. It is probably the most celebrated surrealist painting in the world.

Equally identified with "The Divine Dali," as he liked to call himself, were the pointed, waxed mustache curling up like a bull's horns, long hair and a walking stick — he owned more than 30.

Dali, a founder of the surrealist movement, was the last of an outstanding generation of Spanish painters that included Pablo Picasso and Joan Miro.

Dali died at 10:15 a.m. at Figueras Hospital of a cardiac arrest caused by respiratory insufficiency and pneumonia, said Dr. Charles Ponsati.

Dali had heart problems and had been confined to a wheelchair since suffering severe burns in a fire at his home in 1984. He was taken to the hospital five days before his death.

Dali was born May 11, 1904, to a

Decathlete is hopeful for next Olympics

By FRONDA WISEMAN
University Sports Writer

1992 Olympics here he comes... just as long as no one touches his shoes.

Competing in the Olympics is a dream of many college athletes but for one superstitious BYU trackster it could become a reality.

Dave Draney, a 23-year-old junior from Afton, Wyo., majoring in math, has dreamed of competing in the Olympics since he was 12 years old.

Draney is a decathlete for the BYU track and field team and like many athletes he has his own pre-meet superstitions. "I don't like anyone to touch me or my shoes... not on meet day," said Draney.

But if Draney does make the 1992 Olympics it won't be good luck alone that will bring him there.

According to BYU track and field Assistant Coach Mark Robison, Draney has a good chance of making All-American this year, which would rank him in the top eight in the nation as a decathlete.

A decathlete competes in 10 events, which make up a two-day grueling schedule. On the first day the decathlete competes in the 100 and 400-meter sprints, long jump, high jump and shot put. On the second day he competes in the 110-meter hurdles, the discus throw, pole vault, javelin throw and the 1500-meter run.

Next year Draney hopes to make it as one of the top three in the nation and the following year he would like to train with a full time team in preparation for the Olympics.

At present, Draney's main focus is on making All-American at the NCAA Nationals to be held at BYU this year. "If I'm healthy and everything is going good then I'll be disappointed if I don't make All-American," said Draney.

In high school Draney made all-state in basketball. "The reason I chose track (over basketball) is because track is an individual thing," said Draney, who likes to choose for himself whether he'll win or lose.

"Draney is a very gifted athlete," said Robison, "his greatest assets are his strength and speed." Robison said Draney's best events are the long jump, high jump and hurdles.

Draney said one reason he came to BYU was because it is a big school and that means more competition. Draney likes competition.

Competition this season could come in the form of Cougar gridiron star Scott Peterson.

Peterson, who plays free safety for the BYU varsity football team, did very well his freshman year as a decathlete for the Cougars.

Draney said the better the competition, the more you improve, so he is excited about a possible Peterson comeback. "I've always been competitive," said Draney, "I guess because I was always competing with my older brother."

As a kid, not only did Draney dream of being in the Olympics but he also dreamed of having his own Saturday morning fishing show. Draney loves to fish and in his spare time he and his wife, Carol, go ice-fishing.

Draney, who served a mission in Sao Paulo, Brazil for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has one and a half years of eligibility left with the BYU track and field team.

Cagers attempt to ground Air Force

By ANTON GARRITY
Assistant Sports Editor

The BYU basketball team will continue its string of WAC opponents tonight as they gear up to face conference rival Air Force Academy.

Last week the Cougars stormed back into the conference race with an overtime win over the Falcons of Air Force and got an even bigger win over the favored Rams of Colorado State.

Air Force is coming off an impressive win over Wyoming, 58-55, in Laramie on Saturday. The win marked the first for the Falcons in WAC play this season.

The Cougars are 8-7 overall and 3-3 in conference play, while the Falcons are 9-8 overall and 1-5 in conference play.

Tip-off is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center. The game will not be televised locally.

The JV basketball team will try and avenge an earlier season loss to the College of Southern Idaho. Tip-off is at 4:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center.

Varsity tickets will be used for game admittance.

Thiokol awaits final booster analysis

Morton Thiokol tested this redesigned space shuttle booster earlier this year. In recent tests, the heat created a river of melted snow.

By STEVEN POWELL
University Staff Writer

Morton Thiokol officials are still awaiting the final analysis on the performance of their redesigned space shuttle booster rocket, which must be physically taken apart for inspection.

This test, the last of six mandatory tests on the redesigned booster rocket, was a qualification of the propellant used to fuel the rocket at a temperature of 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

The booster rocket was ordered redesigned by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, after a presidential commission blamed a faulty seal on one of Challenger's boosters for the January 28, 1986 disaster that destroyed the shuttle and killed its seven-member crew.

The redesigned booster has already been used on two successful shuttle missions, according to Morton Thiokol spokesman, Roland Raab. He said the new boosters performed well on each mission.

Raab said this final test was not necessary before the last two missions because they were not cold weather launches. Previously the coldest test conducted on the propellant was 56 degrees Fahrenheit.

The 126-foot long rocket motor weighs 1.2 million pounds, of which 1.1 million pounds is solid-rocket propellant.

The 120-second test-firing generated a 5,000 degree flame which melted the snow in the test bay, creating a river of snow that flowed down the hillside.

Raab said, "Morton Thiokol shows that after 30 years it still knows how to get rid of snow and ice."

"I was about to call Governor Norm Bangerter to get the pump for the lake out," said Allen McDonald, vice president of engineering for space operations.

After a visual inspection of the motor, Thiokol officials said all the hardware looks good.

"This test was conducted under extreme temperatures and will open the window to a wider range of temperatures for launch at the cape," said Royce E. Mitchell, NASA's solid rocket motor manager.

The motor was connected to over 600 instruments which monitored every aspect of the test. Engineers will have to go over all the data collected to see if the firing was successful.

"The bottom line is we didn't see any indication of any anomalies," Mitchell said. "We do see many indications of a good motor."

The success of the last two space shuttle missions, which used the new rocket motors, and the apparent success of Friday's test firing means there will be no major changes in the boosters for years to come," said McDonald.

Friday's test was postponed for 90 minutes while officials waited for the winds at 10,000 feet to reach 12.5 knots, the minimum wind requirement.

Independent Study: For those who can't fit a class they really need into their schedule.

If your schedule for this semester is not working out because you can't get the class you need, take a course through Independent Study. Independent Study courses are an excellent way to supplement your on-campus schedule:

- They are designed to be equivalent to on-campus classes.
- They are taught by BYU professors.
- They give you the same credit.
- They give you added flexibility.
- You can enroll any time.
- You have a full year to complete each course.

Most BYU departments are represented through Independent Study. You have nearly 300 different courses to choose from.

Pick up a free Independent Study catalog today from your College Advisement Center, the information desks at the Wilkinson Center or ASB, or at the Harman Continuing Education Building. Or call us at 378-4044. We'll be happy to answer your questions.

Tax check helps homeless

JOHN MANTELL
and C. O. PETERSEN
University Staff Writers

The homeless of Utah will get help from taxpayers in the form of an income tax check-off provision, established in the last session of the legislature.

According to the State Homeless Coordinating Committee, the new tax form will allow taxpayers to make a voluntary contribution to the Homeless Trust Fund. Contributions will be deducted from a taxpayer's refund added to the check sent back with their return.

Jane Peterson, a legislative researcher, said the Homeless Trust Fund is a restricted account in the general fund. "This year, each tax form will carry a space where the taxpayer can contribute $2, $5, $10, or any amount more than $2," said Peterson. Taxpayers may also choose not to contribute.

Collected funds from tax returns will be distributed by the State Homeless Coordinating Committee.

Maun Alston, employee in the Department of Social Services and chairwoman of the coordinating committee, said, "The income tax check-off provides Utahns an opportunity to continue their generosity in helping homeless people. Many Utahns find themselves in the position of being homeless because of the lack of jobs, low paying jobs or lack of affordable housing."

The State Homeless Coordinating Committee's use of these funds will help the homeless become self-sufficient, obtain occupational training, provide emergency housing and find meaningful employment.

The committee also states that the needs of the mentally ill which are homeless will be helped by the fund.

200 jobs to flow from east Provo water park

By STEVEN K. POWELL
University Staff Writer

A new water park being built in Provo will create more than 200 summer jobs.

Seven Peaks Water park will open May 27, Memorial Day weekend, offering jobs that "will pay minimum wage and above," said Paul Mix, manager of the water park.

The water park is being built in east Provo by the new owners of the Excelsior hotel, the Borchards, of Alpine. It will cost approximately $5 million.

Mix said construction on the water park has already begun. The children's pool and wave pool, along with the plumbing and sewer lines for the entire park, are finished, said Mix.

The park's wave pool will be the largest in the state, and will feature more than 18 different types of waves. The park will have seven water slides, including the only aqua twist and free fall slides in the Intermountain West.

The water park will also feature the lazy river, which will float visitors around the park on inner tubes at about 4 mph.

The park will have catering facilities for up to 1,000 people.

DEGREE

more flexible schedule with fewer required classes and more room for electives. These elective courses will often be from another department, he said, and will therefore broaden the student's knowledge in a certain area.

For example, Thompson said, various math classes will be recommended to accounting students, public relations classes to all students and so forth, allowing them to have a deeper knowledge of all aspects of the field they will be entering.

Thompson also said a number of universities with superior undergraduate business schools have found this approach successful. The University of Michigan, for example, discovered their graduates are placing better and receiving higher salaries since this program was begun, he said.

One problem Thompson said he foresees is convincing recruiters students are qualified even though they haven't specialized. This will only be short term because recruiters will soon realize the students are very well prepared to enter various fields of business, he said.

September 1990 is the date tentatively set for this change to occur, provided it is approved.

The Borchards are also taking over the Heritage Mountain ski resort project in Provo, located on the mountain directly above the water park.

Estimated cost of the takeover is $4 million. The new name of the project is the Seven Peaks Ski Resort.

Kent Compton, the ski resort manager, said the resort is scheduled for completion in December 1991.

The original boundaries of the ski resort have been made smaller, and the developers have a consultant working on an environmental impact statement.

The statement will be submitted to the Uinta Forest Service before the final permit for the resort will be given.

Skiers have been reaching the area via helicopter for more than eight years.

The area averages 450 inches of snow per year, and the altitude of Seven Peaks is about the same as that of Alta and Brighton ski resorts.

The bottom of the resort is 200 feet higher than the bottom of Sundance, said Compton.

When the ski resort opens, skiers will park at the bottom of the mountain, near the water park. They will ride to the ski area in a "funicular," which is similar to a train. It will be the only one of its kind in the United States.

The Borchards also purchased the Excelsior Hotel recently. The hotel was officially renamed "The Excelsior Hotel at Seven Peaks Resort" during a Jan. 17 luncheon. The Borchards are planning extensive remodeling of the rooms and dining areas.

New editions to the hotel will include a child care center, a beauty shop with masseuse and a spa area.
